Killing was 'suicide pact'

Coroner's jury hears evidence in woman's murder

By John Milazzo
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — Sharon D. Harris, an 18-year-old Venice woman found strangled June 25 at the Ilini Motel in Granite City, was killed as part of an alleged suicide pact that fizzled.

Granite City Police Detective Ned Tapp, during a county coroner's inquest Wednesday that Jackie Ray Walker, 24, told police he strangled Harris after she declined using an overdose of Tylenol to commit suicide.

Walker told authorities that Harris had said she had tried such a suicide method in the past and that the medication had only "made her sick," Tapp said.

Once Harris was dead, Walker told police he tried unsuccessfully to use the medication for a fatal overdose, according to testimony. Tapp said Walker checked into the emergency room at St. Elizabeth Medical Center the morning of the murder, complaining that he was suffering from an overdose of Tylenol.

Tapp, who was an investigator at the scene where Harris' partially nude body was found, said Walker admitted in a videotaped confession taken at the hospital that he had tried to drown himself with his hands while he continued to breathe. Walker said he used a webbed belt to kill her.

According to statements read into the record during the inquest, Walker and Harris checked into the motel at about 1 p.m. June 24 and Walker, who believed it to have occurred at about 5 a.m., the following day.

Tapp said that, from statements made by Walker and evidence found in the motel room, authorities believe that before checking into the motel Walker and the victim had traveled to and from Six Flags Over Mid-America near Eureka, Mo., by taxicab.

Tapp said Walker checked into the emergency room at St. Elizabeth Medical Center the morning of the murder, complaining that he was suffering from an overdose of Tylenol.

Tapp also testified that police found a note scribbled by Walker on a paper bag found in the motel room, blaming members of Harris' family for events leading to the murder.

Testimony Wednesday and court records also show that Harris in March had a complaint against Walker, in an effort to protect herself from Walker, after she was beaten at Walker's home in Venice.

Tapp said that Walker, who has been charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the case, was the father of a child of Harris.

Another source close to the investigation said that Harris' family wanted her to move out of Walker's home into an apartment rented for her in Swansea.

Walker, who pleaded innocent at July 6 arraignment, remains in the Madison County Jail in lieu of $500,000 bond set by Circuit Judge Andy Matosian.

An Aug. 6 trial date has been set.

City out to change EPA's plans here

By Sam Hananel
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The city is considering political and legal pressure to influence the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to reconsider its plan to permanently seal the Taracopad lead pile.

Public Works Director Brett Hanke submitted a memorandum to Mayor Tom DeCruis on Tuesday telling the city "research the law and EPA's regulations for a technical or procedural flaw in their proceedings."

The EPA rarely changes its mind, according to Brad Bradley, Superfund site manager for the EPA.

The lead waste pile near 15th and State streets, which stood dormant since 1983, was closed down in 1983.

Although the EPA asserts that sealing the waste pile is the safest measure, city officials contend a permanent 200-ton-high pile of hazardous waste in the downtown area could kill efforts to revitalize the downtown area.

He said the EPA's plan to remove the pile from a block and build the lead waste pile is based on arbitrary scientific evidence of contamination.

Hanke believes the result of blood lead level tests on residents of the 100-block area will show a much smaller amount of soil removal is needed.

The EPA has agreed to conduct blood lead level tests, but Bradley said the agency considers it a "snapshot" test.

It's a one-time sample that tells you acute effects," he said.

But Bradley said the tests do not provide information on future risk to residents. Blood lead level tests are expected to begin this summer and he encourages all residents to be tested.

He said the tests ultimately may be used to improve the city's plan. Tests will be done by the Department of Public Health.

Bridge snarls to begin in earnest

EAST ST. LOUIS — Construction-related traffic delays are expected to begin on the Poplar Street Bridge within a few weeks, now that the Illinois Department of Transportation has awarded a contract for replacement of deck and retaining wall areas.

A second set of repairs is expected to begin in late August or early September, according to Dale Klahr, district engineer for IDOT.

The main two lanes on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River were closed at times during the construction, which is expected to last until the fall of 1992. A third phase of work will then be authorized.

A $13.5-million joint contract for the phase was awarded Tuesday to Gen Con Inc. and the Killian Corp. of Arnold, Mo. Those firms submitted one of the two bids received last month.

The first phase of work will be on the six bridge spans closest to the river. Traffic will be detoured at times to the outer roads, which were expanded recently to two lanes.

Press releases will be issued before lane closures begin, Klahr said.

The start of construction has been delayed nine to six months because the lone bids received in December, February and March were considered too high. At that time, IDOT was seeking bids on the full project.

"There's a sense of relief in getting it started," Klahr said. "As we waited, the bridge deck continued to deteriorate."

The work was divided into three parts in an attempt to attract more bids.

Dividing the project will also increase construction-related congestion to three years from two.

The price of the contract awarded Tuesday was above the estimate, but not as much as the earlier bids, Klahr said. IDOT will not release that estimate because it might affect second-phase bids, which will be received Aug. 3.

The second phase involves deck replacement on the portion of the bridge over Broadway and Main Street in East St. Louis, about a mile east of the spans being repaired in phase one.

The third phase will involve the section between the first two, Klahr said.

The new deck is expected to last 30 years.

Judge to rule on Brooklyn police chief's firing

By David Migoya
Staff writer

BROOKLYN — Mayor James Davis on Wednesday conceded that the Village Board of Trustees had the authority to dismiss a policeman and rehire two others during a board meeting last month.

However, in a request for a permanent injunction against the board, Davis refused to admit the board's firing of Police Chief William Powell at the same meeting.

The announcement came only two days after a St. Clair County judge said he would decide within a week if the board had that authority.

Last week, the board agreed it didn't have the power to remove village Treasurer Vincent Powell, the chief's father, and he was reinstated.

The legal battle over who has the authority to hire and fire city officials stems from a June 20 board meeting in which the board ousted both Powells and another police officer.

Shortly after Davis stormed from the meeting, saying the board had no right to take a vote on firing the two Powells, trustees voted to rehire a policeman whom they had been fired earlier that month.

Wednesday's petition seeks to permanently restrain any new police chief from taking office.

In the request, Davis said he conceded the board had authority to fire a policeman since since officers don't fall under the positions controlled by the mayor.

But Davis said Chief Powell's position is identical to that of village marshal, which is controlled by the mayor.

St. Clair County Associate Judge Jen Fiss issued a temporary restraining order June 29 preventing anyone from acting as police chief or treasurer, and stopping the newly hired officers from performing work.

Councilman Jerome Young, assistant police chief, is serving as acting chief until the suit is concluded.

Since Fiss' order prevents any new officers from starting work, only four police officers are patrolling the streets, Davis said.

Trial begins Monday for real estate broker

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

EAST ST. LOUIS — More than a year after being indicted on seven federal counts, a Granite City real estate broker will soon get her day in court.

A jury was selected Tuesday and the trial of Gaye Flood, owner of Flood Realty Centre, 5220 Nameoki Road, is scheduled to begin Monday in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge William W. Mathis.

Flood was indicted by a federal grand jury on April 20, 1989, on one felony count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and six felony counts of making false statements on applications to obtain government-insured loans. An amended indictment, containing the same seven counts, was filed Aug. 25, 1989.

Following the original indictment, Flood maintained her innocence. On Wednesday she declined comment at the advice of her attorney, Paul Mathis of Belleville. Mathis could not be reached for comment.

Federal Housing Administration loans made to Paul Ray Bowler, vice president of the Granite City School Board, are at issue in the conspiracy charge and five of the false-statement counts. Bowler, in February 1989, pleaded guilty to a single felony count of making a false statement on a loan application.

Bowler had been indicted in December 1988 on four counts of making false statements on loan applications, but the other three counts were dropped in a plea agreement.

For the five false-statement counts against Flood charge she induced Bowler to grossly overstate his assets on separate applications for FHA-insured loans made through the Delmar Financial Co. in Clayton for purchase of apartment buildings at 3916, 3924, 4052 and 4060 Oakmont Drive in Pontoon Beach. The buildings later went into receivership.

In his order, Fiss said: "The rules of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners entitle an officer to a hearing only when he has been suspended or discharged. However, these rules do not specifically exclude the granting of a hearing in other disciplinary matters and I find, however, that the board's policy was to only hold hearings if the discipline involved a loss of pay."

The two officers, with attorney Melroy H. Hargrave of Belleville, then filed a joint suit. Fiss was assigned to hear the case after the two officers' file an answer.

City Attorney Mark Goldenberg said Friday he and the city attorney staff will review the files in the case, but he was not prepared to give an answer to the press.

A new Manual of Rules and Regulations for the department was adopted by the City Council in 1988. It suspends an officer at least in part in the lawsuit. The new rules allow officers to file an official response to oral and written reprimands, but do not allow a hearing before the board for reprimands not involving a loss of wages.

Under the new rules, both the reprimand and response are pulled from the officer's file after one year if the officer has not gotten another reprimand.

McDonnell loss immense

How do you estimate the loss of 4,500 jobs to a community? It may be impossible. And the magnitude of McDonnell Douglas Corporation's decision this week has ramifications affecting both sides of the river.

We'd like to pose a few points to ponder.

Granite City's largest employer has only about 3,400 workers, and it is considered a giant. What would happen if National Steel one day pulled the plug on its Granite City Steel division?

And the other large employers, the District 9 school system and St. Elizabeth Medical Center, together don't equal the employment volume of Granite City Steel.

Too long geared to a defense-oriented economy, McDonnell Douglas is today attempting to correct in one fell swoop what it should never have allowed to happen. Massive employment buildups during the '80s were encouraged by the hawkishness of the Reagan era. Congress and the administration never proved the Communist threat, but America believed it nonetheless. And one of the biggest beneficiaries was McDonnell Douglas.

Today, that threat has diminished. Peace has broken out across Eastern Europe, and the Soviet Empire has turned its attention from expansionism to internal issues that have been too long ignored. We are rediscovering an old ally.

Analysts have been sounding McDonnell for some time now. They will never need to maintain such high employment levels. But McDonnell Douglas, considered a worthy employer by many of its workers, refused to cut back its workforce. Company officials admit they should have acted sooner.

About 4,500 employees of McDonnell Douglas Corp. in the area will lose their jobs by the end of the year, as part of a $700 million cost-cutting program.

Between 14,000 and 17,000 jobs will be eliminated from McDonnell nationwide, said John F. McDonnell, chairman and chief executive officer.

Nationwide, the layoffs will represent 11 percent of McDonnell's total workforce, including about 8,000 layoffs at the Douglas Aircraft Co. in Long Beach, Calif.

In addition to job losses, the real estate industry will doubtless feel the sting. So will taxing bodies, which may lose homeowners to relocation. Hurting, too, will be defense-related businesses and ancillary businesses such as retailers.

Granite City will suffer a loss, but it will be minor compared to the losses felt by towns like St. Charles, Florissant and Hazelwood. We share in their overall plight and hope only that McDonnell can regain its lost ground.

Bad ruling on car liability

All of the gains achieved by enactment of Illinois' mandatory automobile and truck liability insurance law will be lost if a ruling by Jefferson County Circuit Judge Lehman Krause is upheld. This would be unfortunate and we are glad to note the appeal of the decision will be filed. The law went into effect Jan. 1.

The judge says the fines of $500 to $1,000 imposed for non-compliance are unconstitutionally large, but it should be noted that several other states have adopted even more severe penalties, including jail sentences.

Another point is that a lack of compliance can cause great financial harm to innocent traffic victims. Personal injuries, medical treatment, loss of income, death and property damage can have a calamitous impact on families of all income levels.

The contention that the insurance law is unfair to "the working poor" is a particularly weak argument. No one has an inherent right to drive; it is a privilege. And to endanger the physical and financial well-being of the occupants of one's own car and other motor vehicles creates a serious threat to everyone, including poor people.

Scout's honor: It was fun

It must have been 2 in the morning. Now, come to think of it, 2 o'clock had come and gone hours before. With no flashlight I could tell you the time.

Dirty, hot and tired, I didn't sleep a wink on my first-ever night of camping.

From the darkness of my tent came the sawmills snoring of my sleep partners. We were having fun. Probably dreaming about the adventure that awaited him in the days ahead.

This was a recent Sunday night, an introduction to 3½ days at Camp Sunnen, the outdoor camp of the Cahokia Mounds Boy Scout Council. Good drivers will find the camp off Missouri Highway 8, 2½ miles west of Missouri Highway 116, which is route 116. Put it this way: It's about as deep as one can go into the backwoods of Potosi, Mo., without finding the city limits.

The snoring held my attention that first evening, to be sure, but so did every night sound that passed our tent. The pitter-patter of little feet, for instance. Very little feet.

Amateur campers take for granted the finer things in life, like four walls and a bed.

At sunrise, Cub Scouts were bouncing about, anxious to get going.

My wife, son and brother-in-law were among those greeting me as I crawled grizzled and sunburned from under the canvas. I looked like one of those who travel in woods and people talk about, and that wasn't far off the mark.

The camp bell sounded and Cub Scouts from a dozen packs came in hundreds of yards through the woods and open fields for the mess line. I brought up the rear.

Camp Sunnen's directors had laid out an agenda that left little "breather" time. First, was the archery range, then the archer court, then dinner, then lunch, then hikes, then dinner, then swimming, then a campfire. And that was just Monday.

Day 2 was even longer. But it did not start until after the third Monday night, again battered by snoring and assaulted by critters. You learn from these things, however, and by dawn I crawled across the floor, gave 'em a squeeze and pitched them into an unseen corner, too tired to care.

It was a little fresher on the second full day, having caught maybe a couple of hours of sleep, but any energy reserves were depleted by the pace of our activities. Still, I was starting to feel fatigued and had only to watch the faces in the fire light to feel total satisfaction.

By Night 3, I was a veteran. I knew what to expect, and I was too tired to sleep.

The next morning, my brother-in-law and I packed the boys into the car, said goodbyes to some very nice people and headed home.

I left out a lot of this story on purpose. Campers know what happens during such outings, and non-campers need to learn for themselves.

There's nothing like the Great Outdoors to give you a real feel for nature, but I prefer the Great Indoors.

Still, I think I'll go back next year and try it all again.

Censorship leads to extremes, could even target 3 Stooges

To the editor:

Censorship is happening all over the country.

"Pornographic" films and music are coming off shelves. Recording artists are being arrested for using obscene language in the presence of adults who pay to hear it.

Different states are passing legislation on obscenity, claiming it kills women and children.

What's next? Films like Rambo, Die Hard and Mad Max? The Three Stooges may cause a kid to pull his buddy in the shoulder, sit him in a chair with a frying pan.

Reading the Bible may give people weird ideas about killing giants and nailing saviors to crosses.

Huckle and Jeckle (cartoon characters) are violent and have no clothes on. Wiley Coyote gets nailed by the Road Runner numerous times each cartoon.

Should children be allowed to watch such violence? They may find sex, alcohol, explosives and blow up their teachers.

When I was young, I read Alice in Wonderland and immediately wanted to fake drugs and chase rabbits.

Let GOP candidate be heard

To the editor:

A very interesting thing has been happening this summer.

Earlier this month, Republican candidate for Madison County treasurer, John Shimkus, attempts to appear in a "public" place, he is thrown off the premises by local Democratic officials.

Outside of the fact that these people are clearly violating Shimkus' right to freedom of speech, what are they so afraid of?

On Thursday, July 5, Shimkus attempted to hold a press conference in the county public park across from the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville.

Mr. Hawkins, the county's building zoning and environmental control administrator, crossed the street from the courthouse and told Shimkus that he could not hold his press conference in the park.

Although Hawkins confessed that the park belonged to the county, he would not concede that it was a "public" park. He proceeded to tell Shimkus and his associates that he and his two companions would throw Shimkus' things out of the park if Shimkus did not immediately remove them himself.

When Shimkus moved to the small group meeting outside the park, the park caretakers started lawnmowers and started to eat the grass immediately behind Shimkus. This activity ceased when Shimkus' press conference ended.

Versions of this same incident have occurred time and again this summer.

Coincidence? I doubt it.

Overreaction by local Democrats? Possible.

Hatred? Definitely.

If the Democrats have nothing to fear or to hide in the county treasurer election, then they should let Shimkus be heard without any further harassment. Local voters can't happen to hear just what Shimkus wants to say.

GOP gets his vote this time

To the editor:

As a citizen of Madison County and a lifetime Democrat, I am ashamed of the current controversy involving the county treasurer, Miss Henkhaus.

I will not go into the particulars of the case; that is not my concern. What has gotten my goat is the possible effect on the justice system of this area's one-party political system.

When a county has only had one member of the opposing party elected to countywide office in the last 10 years, I'd say we have a one-party system.

If the citizens of Madison County wish to only elect my fellow Democrat to office, that is the will of the people.

What would happen if an elected official used this inherent political power to shift the system toward his own personal agenda?

Politicians must understand that the laws of our country apply to all people, even them.

We need to remember that there still is a two-party system in place.

I won't vote Republican very often, but this time is where I am voting.

Parent-consent dangerous

To the editor:

Illinois currently has no parental consent laws for abortion. At The Hope Clinic For Women Ltd. in Granite City, we saw almost 100 minors last year who came to us for an abortion from states requiring parental consent. In general, we see women from a 10-state area.

Our counselors estimate that 90 percent of teens we see under the age of 15 discussed the unintended pregnancy with their parents.

A majority of the teen-agers we see over the age of 15 discuss the unintended pregnancy with their parents.

When minors do not tell their parents about plans for an abortion, it is for very good reasons.

In Idaho, a 13-year-old sixth grader was shot to death by her father after he learned that she had planned to abort a pregnancy that he imagined.

In September 1988, a pregnant 16-year-old suffered a self-induced abortion (chosen to avoid parental consent). She did not want to hurt or disappoint her parents, who are traveling around the country speaking out against parental consent laws.

At The Hope Clinic we see minors who do not tell their parents about their decision to terminate a pregnancy for a wide variety of reasons.

These include: having an old sister who got pregnant and was kicked out of the house, a youngest child whose older siblings had all failed at everything they tried to do.

They are trying not to disappoint their parents, fear of being verbally abused or actually beaten, trying to protect a family member from a heart attack, and the fear of shame and rejection.

Parental consent laws increase second-trimester procedures.

In Illinois, the number of second-trimester abortions increased from 16.8 percent to 22 percent after such a law was passed.

After the passage of a 1981 ordinance, the number of second-trimester abortions decreased from 16.8 percent to 22 percent after such a law was passed.

Minors who, like Dennis, petitioned to bypass parental consent, testified that minors were the best equipped to decide whether they should tell their parents of plans for an abortion.

If we lived in a perfect world, minors would discuss important decisions with loving parents. Our world, however, is far from perfect.

Parental consent laws for abortion do not serve to bring families closer together; in reality, they only serve to discriminate, intimidate and endanger the lives of minors.

Walt Baumberger stands surrounded by some of the model cars he has created.

Tin cans, wood scraps make Walt's cars go

By Pam Doepke-Hurd
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Walt Baumberger makes cars, but not in a factory.

He has been building model cars and other items off and on for years — many years — at his home on Pine Street, where he resides with his wife, Alice.

Among his other retirement years activities last winter, he decided to restore four model cars that he had built (from tin salvaged from coffee cans) more than 40 years ago, when he was discharged from the Navy after World War II.

"Well, I got the bug to build more (model cars). My fingers won't let me work much with metal, so I got something I could handle," he says. Because of arthritis, he started utilizing wood for his hobby.

Baumberger creates the miniature automobiles to scale and tries to be as accurate as possible in the design.

So far, using maple and walnut for his creations, Baumberger shapes the pieces of the vehicles with a band saw and a saber saw.

Wood glued them and, after some paint and clear varnish are applied, the labor of love is completed. A typical model car leaves him "assembly line" in about a month.

Baumberger usually ends up giving his creations away as gifts to friends and relatives.

In addition to cars, he makes a variety of tea clocks, wall plaques and other knickknacks.

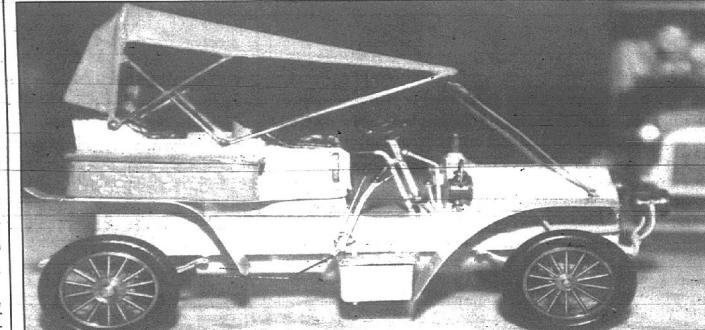

"It's just a hobby," he says. "Probably the best one there is."

"I don't know how many things I have given away over the years, especially toys."

He has a total of seven grandchildren. He has been retired for eight and a half years from the Union Electric Co.

At 72, he finds that his woodworking keeps him occupied on long winter evenings.

"I don't like television and only watch it as a last resort."

The oldest car in his collection is a 1904 Cadillac he made in 1945, it is his favorite.

Several of the cars that Baumberger has made of wood and metal.

From gang-style to white-collar, Simon still crusading against crime

(First of two columns)

Savings and loan scandals were on his mind Saturday but Paul Simon was also happy to reminisce about this country's rough-and-tumble politics of the 1940s and 1950s.

Accompanied by his wife, Jeanne, he was on his way from an overnight stay in Belleville. The morning's agenda included campaigning for re-election at the Jersey County Fair.

Located mostly between St. Clair and Jersey counties is Madison County, his former political base, so the junior U.S. senator from Illinois invited me to breakfast with him. Paul Simon and two of his staff members.

PUNCHBOARDS were mentioned by the senator as we began to talk about the era when the Troy Tribune, and the Press-Record, the former East St. Louis Journal and others crusaded against the kind of lawlessness that tended to corrupt governmental processes.

Known as the youngest editor in the nation when he moved to Troy in 1947 at the age of 19, Paul considered himself in the paper why some punchboards in public businesses were raided as illegal but, if you did business with a certain distributor, there was immunity from prosecution.

One claim led to another, and within two years Paul's friend, Gov. Adlai Stevenson, had raided casinos/handbooks at the 200 Club in Madison and the Hyde Park Club in Venice. Two years later, Stevenson was elected governor and Paul Simon received the first of his two nominations for President of the United States.

A senator since 1954, Paul sought the White House himself in 1968 and now seeks to be re-elected to the Senate.

ARMY DUTY INTERRUPTED news careers in the early 1950s.

Shortly after being discharged, we both found out the hard way (on separate occasions) that gang-syndicate gamblers who had moved to the Mounds Club/

Club Prevue on Collinsville Road had not forgotten our young faces. (It was not unusual for club operators to keep a file of pictures of investigators and journalists.)

Other recollections included his visit to St. Louis' Second Presbyterian Church (Young Adult Group); with me and, like Paul, another future legislator, Rep. Stephen (Ski) Lofgren, when I attended the (Sen. Estes) Kefauver Crime Committee hearings; and Paul's visit to my home after the dinner at which I was installed as Chamber of Commerce president.

EVEN IN THE 1990s, there are causes to be supported and wrongs to be righted. As Saturday's breakfast ended, I received Paul's latest news dispatches on savings-and-loan losses and thefts.

In an announcement prepared by Press Secretary David Carle, it was noted that the Senate has passed major crime legislation that will give prosecutors new legal tools, authored by Sen. Simon, to step up prosecution of S&L fraud.

Simon's S&L freeze-'em-and-seize package in the crime bill was combined with other measures to give prosecutors broad new powers to investigate and prosecute fraud, penalize violators and recover losses.

The Senate passed the crime bill July 11 in a 94-6 vote.

THE SIMON MEASURES will help ensure that the millions of dollars stolen from banks must be stashed away in foreign banks out of the reach of the law.

"They also give the attorney general the power — through the civil forfeiture process — to seize assets derived from financial institution fraud.

Simon and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., reached agreement with the Justice Department on a third, "bounty hunter" provision that allows private citizens with specific information on S&L fraud to help bring those cases to trial.

IN THIS "SPARE TIME" these days, the energetic, bow-tied, deep-voiced, still youthful-looking lawmaker has done a few hundred other tasks. As Carle said ...

"The Senate Judiciary Committee on July 12 approved legislation to expand the attorney general's role in investigating and prosecuting S&L fraud."

"A leading member of the panel, Simon added the bill to larger legislation aimed at reducing the cost and delay in civil actions in federal courts ..."

THE ANTI-CRIME package included several other Simon bills targeting drug crime and S&L prosecution.

"Simon said, 'Drug-related crime is clogging our courts. And I hope we'll also soon be seeing more S&L prosecutions.'

"We need to get the wheels of justice moving more quickly and efficiently,' he means,' which means we need more judges.'

One of the new judges might be assigned to Madison County.

SERVICE TO CITIZENS also occupies a lot of the time of lawmakers and their staffs, and there is much legislation related to non-crime matters.

The House on July 12 approved $66 million for the Metra rail rapid transit system and Paul Simon is heading funding efforts for the project in the Senate. His $101 million bill includes $4 million for initial engineering work on a proposed extension in St. Clair County.

Paul Simon has met with Walter Payton on getting a new St. Louis football franchise. Once a die-hard Big Red fan, Paul has spoken to the NFL commissioner and is contacting the team owners he knows.

Flood

An other false-statement count involving the same charges Flood induced Bowler to overstate by $10,000 the selling price of a house at 2617 Pine St. in Granite City in order to obtain an FHA-insured loan through the Lomas and Nettleton Co. of Granite City.

The other false-statement count against Flood charges he induced Jack and Sharon Orwig of Granite City to overstate their assets on an application for a Veterans Administration loan for a house at 22 Victoria Drive in Pontoon Beach.

The conspiracy charge against Flood relates to her alleged actions in connection with Bowler and Orwig loans.

Specifically, the indictment charges she instructed Jack Orwig to prepare a statement showing the $6,100 cash payment for the Victoria Drive property was obtained by selling a 1950

Nash automobile, cashing in an insurance policy, selling furniture and drawing from his savings.

In fact, the indictment charges the money was obtained by a loan made to Orwig by his employer, Heidtman Steel Products.

It also alleges Flood instructed Bowler to borrow money, and in fact, loaned him $23,000, and place it in his savings account to show he had assets of $30,000 in relation to the purchase of the Oakmont properties.

The indictment states Bowler then withdrew the money and returned it to Bowler and the other lenders.

The indictment charges Flood closed sales contracts on the Oakmont properties with false sales price figures.

In relation to the Pine Street property, the indictment charges Flood had two sales contracts drawn up with different sales prices and closed with a sales contract with the false, inflated price.

If convicted, Flood could face a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $250,000 fine for each count charged.

Bowler also faces a maximum penalty of five years and a $25,000 fine, but he has not yet been sentenced. As a convicted felon, Bowler might also lose his position on the school board.

In a declaratory judgment in March 1989, Associate Judge Jonathan Isbell ruled conviction occurs upon sentencing and conviction, not re-appointment of school board attorney William Schooley that Bowler's position on the board became vacant when Bowler pleaded guilty.

Flood was recently honored by the Illinois Association of Realtors for having more than $5 million in closings during the past year.

Trivia

In 1915 Mollenbrock's Dry Goods at 109 W. Main Street in Granite City dressed gingham dresses at 98 cents each. It also offered straw hats for 39 cents, ladies bonnets for 19 cents, and gingham dresses for children at 39 cents.

from other county road work Dietzel said. But county roads are in generally good condition because of several mild winters, he said.

"We're in the business of building roads and bridges here," but this (project) is necessary to comply with the new law," Dietzel said.

Dietzel said the project will be funded with county property taxes. He hopes some of the money will be recouped by giving it to a fund that is the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

The tanks will be replaced with two larger tanks in a nearby location.

Also on Wednesday, the board approved a Buildings Committee resolution establishing a new cigarette smoking policy that restricts smoking in county buildings designated areas.

The board also approved an amendment to that resolution offered by Harold Byers, D-Highland, which called for sending a letter to the county environmental sanitarium on Troy Road.

A resolution also offered by the Buildings Committee — establishing a policy for change orders — was voted down. The committee's proposal, which would have required a majority of the county commissioners to approve a change order, was defeated.

Under the policy, which committee members say is in the construction stage, the committee will have the authority to approve individual change orders up to $25,000.

It contains a $100,000 total cap for all change orders. Orders beyond that amount would require board approval.

Murray seen as tyrant, hard worker

Bill Murray's co-workers in the new comedy film "Quick Change" offer two schools of thought on what it's like to work with the 39-year-old comedian and actor.

Randy Quaid, who portrays a simple-minded friend in the film, says Murray is a tyrant and a dictator.

"Let's put it this way, I wouldn't want him for my daddy," Quaid says.

Murray counters, "Who would want a goot like Randy for a son?"

Co-star Geena Davis and co-director and screenwriter Howard Franklin paint a different picture. They describe Murray as a hard-working colleague who tries to keep everybody loose.

Which view is accurate? Murray says both are right.

"Yeah, they're right. I do want things my way," Murray says. "Underneath all my disarming, personal sloppiness beats the heart of a true SOB."

"But I do try to keep it fun all the time. Making it look like fun. It's also a lot of work and can be hell, but it can be fun, too. When you're making a comedy it's important to keep everybody in a good mood all the time. I feel that responsibility comes with my salary."

Murray's salary has sky-rocketed since his first two films with director Ivan Reitman, "Meatballs" (1974) and "Stripes" (1981). Murray topped out in 1988 with "Scrooged," for which he received $5 million plus an unconfirmed 5 percent of gross box office receipts.

Based on the success of those films and the $100 million plus box office scores of both "Ghostbuster" films, Murray has garnered the added privilege of acting as a producer on his newest film, "Quick Change."

Born in Chicago, Murray began his performing career in theater as a member of the famous improvisational comedy group Second City in 1972.

"When I first started with Second City, I worked for nothing,"

Harry Hamm

PRODUCER-ACTOR Bill Murray played Frank Cross, an exploitative television executive, in "Scrooged."

Murray says, "Then one night the sardine we were trying to start paying me. It was that exact moment when I heard that I was going to be paid for something I loved to do more than anything else — that I realized that anything else — that I realized what was actually under way."

Murray, who first gained national attention on Jan. 15, 1977, when he replaced Chevy Chase as the host of Saturday Night Live, won an Emmy in 1978 for his writing on the show in 1978. The characters he created, including the oily lounge singer, name-dropping movie critic and the "noodie" dad with his "noogies," are etched in the memories of millions of the show's fans.

"The happiest memories of my career are from what happened on Friday nights, when I was doing that Saturday Night Live," Murray says. "We worked in a studio where there were usually a lot of people around all week long, including during our meetings and the show's rehearsals."

"But on Friday nights, the tours didn't operate and the regular NBC employees went home. They just left the building. There was no visiting, there was no show business attachments. There was just the crew and the actors, and that was very personal, very private."

Everybody knew who everybody was. We were a bunch of young people on the threshold of a great success. We had some people around who were older and wiser who had seen people go through before and nothing was spared. It was very direct, very honest, very equal. That was something only the seven of us (including Dan Aykroyd) and the late Gilda Radner knew about. Those Friday nights are the only thing I really miss."

Murray, who turned down the starring role eventually taken by Robert Hays in the original "Airplane" film from 1980 ("I didn't think it would be a hit"), says his pride in his craft is an important trait that is absent among most performers in Hollywood.

"Actors always lie," Murray says seriously. "They mostly lie about their sex lives, why they really took a movie and how long they spend in makeup. I've heard many hack actors milk the makeup thing until it has become the biggest lie there is. If anybody ever spent the time they said they did in makeup, they'd end up in another film."

Murray says he is the world's biggest Chicago Cubs fan. He wishes the team had better pitching.

"They're better off than the Cardinals. The Cardinals don't have pitching or hitting," says Murray, who adds that he follows Billiken at St. Louis University.

Harry Hamm is entertainment editor for b6.com KMOX (1120) and the CBS Radio Network.

POM PON SQUAD SELECTED: Cari Crawford (center) has been named captain of the 1990-91 Granite City High School Pom Pon Squad. Amy Newport (left) and Angie Jacobs (right) will serve as co-captains. A total of 29 girls have been selected. Other members are Angel Brinkman, Tammy Brinkman, Brandi Green, Shannon Hahn, Denise Harper, Melissa Hasse, Kristen Hayden, Anne Hewlett, Stefanie Jacobs, Amy Johnson, Shelley Justice, Vicki Justice, Candie Kessler, Lori Lignoul, Ann Logan, Darla Mayhall, Jodi Melzer, Kristen Novacich, Laura Patton, Sally Pavlow, Amy Russell, Tina Scaturo, Mindy Stephens, Susan Wachter, Shaw Weeks and Erika Wheatley. The squad is preparing for a competition to be held at Eastern Illinois University at the end of July. The squad performs in numerous school activities throughout the year.

Optimists

"Clint pitched the best game we've had all year. We have a reputation throughout the league that we can't hit the curve ball. Until we start hitting again off-speed pitchers are all that we'll see."

It didn't look like a pitcher's duel as Waterloo scored first but ran out of pitches. Shields hit the first pitch for a double to left and Vogel hit North's next pitch down the left-field line for an RBI double.

Waterloo added an insurance run in the seventh after a hit dugout. Shields reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on second baseman Billy Van Buskirk's error.
